FINANCE DIRECTOR, BBC STUDIOS IN AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND

Tim Curry is the Finance Director for BBC Studios in Australia and New Zealand.

He joined BBC Worldwide in November 2014, which subsequently became BBC Studios following a merger with the BBC's production arm in April 2018.

Tim's role provides financial analysis, financial planning and control across the Australia and New Zealand business.

Tim joined BBC Worldwide from AMT Group, where he was the Chief Financial Officer for the mobile phone retailer. In 2013 he worked as COO/CFO for The Leading Edge, an international market research and strategy services company, where he helped to improve profitability across the business.

Prior to this, Tim was the Group Financial Controller at pay television provider AUSTAR for six years, from 2006-11. In this role he contributed to the company's strategic direction as part of the senior management team and had specific financial responsibility for joint ventures XYZ, Nickleodeon, MCN and Main Event with Foxtel and others.

Tim qualified as a Chartered Accountant with PricewaterhouseCoopers in London and worked for them for 10 years in London, Sydney and Vancouver in a number of senior roles.
